THE FOOTAGE DETECTIVES

The Footage Detectives - Episode 123 -

Well fellow footage detectives we start this week with a great reel of a secret operation by the Metropolitan Police in the late 60s – then Noels found a really interesting reel on the history of The British Legion, a really interesting time piece. There's some great memory joggers this week, everything from Eiffel Tower Crystals and Randalls nut crunch... From Kingston Upon Thames Monday Markets to Tonibell Miniballs! There's also been some fascinating responses from you out there of, everything Tom Callard and Bowser salespeople to mobile shops. there's a great question for Bob about 'The Blue Tango' running behind local ads in the cinemas... and did you spot Barbara Shelley as a fire maiden in a piece of netted curtain fashioned into a space dress? Our favourite letter is about a group of lads in the 50s finding some unused artillery on the beach And a box of matches... can you guess what happened next? So get your biscuit supply ready and your spy glasses and we'll see you Sunday at 5 for The Footage Detectives! [S]
